

CARIBBEAN STUD POKER

Caribbean Stud Poker is a poker-style table game that is played with the objective of getting a five-cards poker hand that beats the dealer’s five-card poker hand.

The game begins with the player placing a bet (or ANTE) and receiving 5 cards, while the dealer receives an additional 5 cards. All player cards are face-up, one of the dealer’s cards is dealt face-up, but the others are hole cards.

After looking at the cards, the player must choose to either “FOLD” or raise their “BET”. The Raise bet must be twice the ANTE bet. If the player folds, then it loses its ANTE bet.

The dealer then turns over their other four cards to reveal their complete hand of five cards.

POSSIBLE OUTCOMES

If the player raises, the dealer checks their cards to see if they qualify to call the Raise bet. If the dealer qualifies, the hands are compared and the better hand wins all placed bets. In case the compared hands are of equal strength, both ANTE and Raise bets will push.

If the player wins, they will win even money (1:1) on their ANTE bet and their Raise bet will be awarded according to the poker hand ranking in the payout table.

If the dealer and the player tie, both the ANTE bet and Raise (Call bet) will push. Push is a tied hand between the player and dealer. In this instance, the player wager is returned.

You'll find all payout rules in the RULES section within the game.

DEALER QUALIFICATION

To qualify, the dealer must have at least an Ace and a King. The lowest qualifying hand for the dealer is Ace, King, 4, 3, 2.

If the dealer does not qualify, the player will win even money (1:1) on their ANTE bet and their Raise bet will push.
